<sup>1</sup> Dr. Dorothea Martin, Ph.D., Phi Beta Kappa, Mount Holyoke Women's College, Ph.D., Michigan, believed to be the first 100% blind-from-birth person to earn the Ph.D. She scored 185 on a standard IQ test, placing her among the 100 most intelligent people on earth, according to Scientia, the scientific journal; Professor William Maxwell, Ed.D., Harvard University, inducted into Harvard's Iota Chapter, Phi Delta Kappa Honor Society, as the top doctoral student, 1966. The test was validated in Arizona in 2011, at the world's first all computer science university. The test requires high speed internet connection, absolute isolation, and takes about 90 - 100 minutes. Two university presidents praised the test as "a pleasure to take."
